

Performing Arts

In Youth Stages' production of The Lion, the Witch, and the Wardrobe, Laurie wears a crown as the White Witch and Joey wears a mask to become Aslan the Lion (see photo on reverse). Imagine you are the costume designer for the show! On the head below, either:

1. Draw what you think the lion should look like in the show. Is your design a mask? A hat? Or would you use makeup?
2. How would you create the look for the White Witch? Would you use makeup to create the character? Or would you design a costume piece such as a pointy witch hat or a crown?

Visual Arts

When Lucy, Peter, Edmund and Susan opened the wardrobe, they found themselves in Narnia. Draw what you think Narnia looks like!
What does the landscape look like? Who is in the scene?

Language Arts

K-2nd grade

Write a letter to the actors. Let them know:

- your favorite/least favorite character
- your favorite/least favorite part of the story
- what you liked/disliked about The Lion, the Witch and the Wardrobe

3rd-6th grade

Write a newspaper style review of the play!

Be sure to include:

- whether you thought the simple staging worked for the play
- what you thought of the costumes
- what you thought of the quality of the acting

Laurie A. Hardy has been an artist/educator with Youth Stages, LLC since its inception. Prior to that, she worked with Creative Theatre Unlimited in Princeton for 16 years as an actress, playwright and teacher. She received her Master's Degree from Penn State University in Children's Theater and was an arts specialist for the Central Susquehanna Intermediate Unit in Lewisburg, PA. Laurie enjoys working creatively with young children "There is nothing as wonderful as the look of joy on a child's face when he/she is enjoying the magic of make-believe!" She is the mother of two young adults.

Joey Rizzolo graduated from Oberlin College in Ohio with high honors in theatre. He has worked for the Great Lakes Theater Festival, The Cleveland Public Theater, and the Black River Theater Co. Parallel to acting and directing, Joey works with children in theatre currently teaching at the Performing Arts Studio in Scotch Plains and St. John's University in Staten Island. He has also taught at-risk youth at the MAD Factory, at-risk teens at the Alternative School of Lorain County, and preschoolers at the Lorain County KidsmART program. He is the father of a middle-school son, Avery.
